Van Horn, Tex., May 18.—Van Horn cattlemen have been receiving large consignments of cattle during the past week, as well as making several shipments to other points. Among the cattle shipped in were 1600 head received by J. W. Corn, to be put on the range purchased from Hall and Canon.

J. M. Brownfield and his sons, John and Dick Brownfield, Albert Sanders & Son, John Coffey, Terry Hawkins and Byrd brought in 350 head of cattle from the north end of the county. This cattle were sent to Graham & Price.

Shipments Are Made Under Special Permits; Expect Quarantine Modification.

Although the quarantine against Mexican cattle has not been raised, certain permits for the entry of Mexican stock are now being issued, and a number of shipments from southern ports have been received. Shipments of 300 head of cattle and mules was received last week at Galveston, this being one of the largest shipments since the quarantine order became effective. The cattle is all being held in quarantine for a week before it is allowed to proceed.

May Modify Quarantine. Cattlemen here were advised Monday that a meeting of the livestock board was to be held Tuesday afternoon at Austin following a conference with Gov. Ferguson, and it is expected that the quarantine order, though still in effect, will be greatly modified. Among the most important modifications expected are the inclusion of a number of other southwestern states in the four state quarantine agreement, which is now effective between Texas, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona. This agreement permits interstate shipments. It is believed that Colorado, Utah and California, and possibly Kansas, will be added to the quarantine agreement.

Range Conditions Good. Shipments through El Paso have been light, though local cattlemen are gathering and shipping the stock. Range conditions to the east of El Paso are excellent, with an especially good range in the Valentine section. All water holes are full and the stock appears to be in fine condition.

William H. Hargis, president of the Panhandle & Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association, is in Amarillo, attending a meeting of the executive committee.

"A Man and His Wife"

Isabel Gets Suspicious Over a Mysterious Telephone Call To John.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER XXII

ON the afternoon following her discussion with her husband, Isabel Hamilton called up Ida Ferris and explained that while she longed to accept the delightful dinner invitation, John had an engagement for that evening—an engagement he could not break.

"Oh, I'm so sorry," Mrs. Ferris exclaimed. "And, tentatively, I am sure you are so newly married that you would not come without Mr. Hamilton."

"Well, that depends," Isabel hesitated. "I might go without him—"

She was interrupted by her friend's merry laugh. "I think the bubble is beginning to rise to the surface of the water," Ida teased. "I am delighted, my dear, for soon you will emerge and be yourself again."

Isabel was glad that Ida could not see her blush of mortification, mingled with resentment. Yet her tone showed that she was pleased.

"I did not think, Ida," she began, "that you would misunderstand my position."

"Oh, my dear," Ida Ferris protested, "don't sound so cross! I was only in fun. Young wives always get lots of teasing from their husbands. You are not so silly as to be vexed—are you?"

"No," Isabel replied, conquering her momentary indignation. "Perhaps," she explained, "I am a bit sensitive for it seems as if I was taking a liberty in letting you even think of having me without my husband. An unattended woman is not always welcome at a dinner."

"That you shall not be unattended, for I shall ask some man to take your husband's place at the table," Ida assured her. "That is, if you can think of a man who might do it. I have some nice chap who would make a very good dinner."

"I don't know," Isabel stammered. An idea had occurred to her. Why might she not suggest David Duval or Henry Denny? But no—Denny was not just the kind of a man she cared to introduce as her escort. He was not as refined as Duval. Certainly he was not as much of a gentleman as well educated.

"Well, do you know anyone whom you would like me to invite?" Ida asked.

Idea Is Suggested. What would John say. Would he approve? She must have time to consider.

"Will it do if I drop you a note this evening?" Isabel queried. "There are several men who might do, but I want to think the matter over. Meanwhile, if you remember some man you would like to suggest, please let me know."

"No," Isabel knew, "I would prefer some nice person whom you already know. It would be much pleasanter for you, as all except myself will be strangers to me. This dinner is in your honor, you know—as I want you to feel that matters just as I would like them."

"Thank you, dear," Isabel returned. "I will write you this evening."

"All right, my dear," said Mrs. Hamilton. "I will write him, begging him to excuse me for a moment."

A Narrative of Everyday Affairs

Their Married Life

Helen Entertains the Club At An Afternoon Bridge.

HELEN lifted a flushed face from the table where she was making a salad dressing. Nora was whipping cream, and even Winifred had been pressed into service and was picking out nut meats for the omelette. Helen was waiting for the oven.

Helen was to entertain the bridge club that afternoon, and she was particularly anxious to make a good dinner. Helen was to entertain the bridge club that afternoon, and she was particularly anxious to make a good dinner.

"Well, have just simple refreshments," she had said when she had planned the day before with her mother; and now it seemed as though the refreshments were not going to be so simple after all.

A smile twitched Helen's lips at Nora's effort to make her feel at ease. "Help me, Helen," she said breathlessly. "The flowers are all dead."

"Aren't they wonderful?" "But where did they come from, child?" said her mother, who had followed Nora into the living room.

"Lieutenant Roberts, one of the army officers, Warren and I met in Colon."

Helen's mother smiled quizzically. "Is he in New York?" "Apparently, yes; I suppose he will call," said Helen, as carefully as possible. "But how fortunate that the flowers should have arrived just when you were expecting them so beautifully!"

"They certainly are gorgeous," said her mother. "What are you going to do with the other vase?" "In the dining room, on the sideboard. Take them there, will you, Nora, while I slip into my hat."

A few minutes later Helen was dressed and in the living room, ready to receive the first comers.

"What perfectly wonderful flowers!" said Mrs. Wallace, a friend of Mrs. Stevens. "What rich colors! Helen, you must have a florist of all he had, or else you have a hidden admirer. Don't tell me."

"I know you do, dear, but it's only a friend," Helen said, smiling.

Combing Won't Rid Hair Of Dandruff

(The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single grain and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustreous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—Advertisement.
